

Re: That nice Sony company

Re: That nice Sony company

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2005-11/msg00173.html>

- From: Ted Edwards <Ted_Espamless@xxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 02 Nov 2005 17:28:39 GMT
-

martin griffith wrote:

taken from rec.audio.pro.

Nice bit of digital sleuthing

http://www.sysinternals.com/blog/2005/10/sony-rootkits-and-digital-rights.

Well worth reading. The best defence is to get rid of windoze and don't but from anyone employing copy protection. Yeah, it's somewhat of a nusience but if you continue to use wincrap and similar stuff you are condoning their practices.

I have never bought a piece of copy protected software in over forty years of computing. The license agreement for my OS says that I may not simultaneously `_run_` the system on more than one computer at a time.

One of the replies to the article suggested that it was another reason to use a Mac. That might have been true a few years ago but Apple is now in bed with Redmond.

Ted

.