

calculator for resistive divider using standard resistor values?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2005-12/msg04176.html>

- From: "M. Noone" <nleahcim@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: 23 Dec 2005 12:37:52 -0800
-

Hi – I feel like I saw this somewhere but have since lost the link. It was a website where you could put in the ratio you want a resistive voltage divider to give, and it would give you combinations of standard resistor values that would yield that ratio.

Anybody know of anything like this?

Or are there any tricks to finding these values that I'm just not aware of?

Thanks,

–M. Noone

• Follow-Ups:

- ◆ Re: calculator for resistive divider using standard resistor values?
◇ From: Rene Tschaggelar
 - ◆ Re: calculator for resistive divider using standard resistor values?
◇ From: Bob Monsen
 - ◆ Re: calculator for resistive divider using standard resistor values?
◇ From: John Devereux
 - ◆ Re: calculator for resistive divider using standard resistor values?
◇ From: Rich Grise, but drunk
 - ◆ Re: calculator for resistive divider using standard resistor values?
◇ From: Ken Taylor
-
- Prev by Date: Re: Fixed Point: cut, round, saturation?
 - Next by Date: Re: calculator for resistive divider using standard resistor values?
 - Previous by thread: Re: Fixed Point: cut, round, saturation?
 - Next by thread: Re: calculator for resistive divider using standard resistor values?
 - Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread