

Re: How do i make "volume" work in HTML?

---

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2006-01/msg04574.html>

---

- From: Ben Bradley <ben\_nospam\_bradley@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Wed, 25 Jan 2006 22:12:54 GMT
-

On Thu, 12 Jan 2006 13:33:19 GMT, "Michael A. Terrell" <mike.terrell@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

>Frithiof Andreas Jensen wrote:

>>

>> "Robert Baer" <robertbaer@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message

>> news:FB4xf.1368\$Hd4.566@xx

>> > Code being used:

>> >

>> > <body bgcolor="#ffffff" link="#0000ff" vlink="#660099" text="#000000"

>> > topmargin=0 leftmargin=0>

>> > <embed src="Lava2.WAV" volume="255" loop="true" hidden="true">

>> >

>> > It does not matter what i put in for volume, the result is always MAX!

>> > How does one control the level?

>>

>> Web "designers" must *eventually* absorb the fact that nobody cares enough >> about how their "art" renders to actually implement it correctly in a >> browser – but it is sure taking a long time to penetrate: HTML *suggests* >> how the page should be rendered. That is all you get.

>>

>> PS:

>>

>> The very *worst* idiot, narcissist "web designers" even make special pages >> that tells you what browser to use and what to download in order to view >> their creation; and that is all you get until you Obey!

>>

>> And, NO, I am not going to jump burning hoops just to read some shit on the >> web. Which always causes offence ;-)=

A website isn't universal unless it's compatible with Edlin. :)

>

>

> I was going to sign my dad up for the weekly specials E-mail from > Harbor Freight. <http://www.harborfreight.com> Well, you can't use an > E-mail address with a period in the user name. They also have the right > mouse button disabled so you can't open anything in a new page, so you > have to keep hitting the "back" button, which wastes both time and

Re: How do i make "volume" work in HTML?

>bandwidth.

I use Firefox 1.0.7 and don't have a problem with right-click, open in new tab on that site. Does their site disable that on another browser? Talk about incompatible websites...

>Their inventory search function is poor at best. You can >search for the exact name of some items and not find it, but if you have >their stock number, you MIGHT find it. I'll bet that website design >cost them some sales.

---

• Follow-Ups:

- ◆ Re: How do i make "volume" work in HTML?
◇ From: Michael A. Terrell

• References:

- ◆ OT: How do i make "volume" work in HTML?
◇ From: Robert Baer
- ◆ Re: How do i make "volume" work in HTML?
◇ From: Frithiof Andreas Jensen
- ◆ Re: How do i make "volume" work in HTML?
◇ From: Michael A. Terrell

- Prev by Date: Re: shorting of analog and digital grounds
- Next by Date: Re: Summery Re: Frequency signal multiplier – repost.
- Previous by thread: Re: How do i make "volume" work in HTML?
- Next by thread: Re: How do i make "volume" work in HTML?
- Index(es):
  - ◆ Date
  - ◆ Thread