

Re: mystery dac

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2006-04/msg02091.html>

- From: Robert Latest <boblalatest@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: 15 Apr 2006 09:14:29 GMT
-

On 2006-04-13, Joerg <notthisjoergsch@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Yes, and I want to try it out soon. However, I have to mind what others use to read my documentation. If they use Acrobat then the problems are there again. With HTML I have rarely seen issues.

HTML is OK if the documentation is supposed to read only on-screen (in my experience, browser printouts are just plain ugly), and if you can ensure that all the related files are present, have the proper names and are in their respective directories.

As for PDF: I usually am on Linux and use xpdf (simple, no features, just a reader) or Acrobat Reader 5 on Windows. I don't know how newer versions behave.

robert

.