

Re: New forum needs moderators

---

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2006-05/msg03607.html>

---

- From: Fred Bloggs <nospam@xxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Sat, 20 May 2006 16:25:18 GMT
-

John Larkin wrote:

On 20 May 2006 02:40:12 GMT, et472@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx (Michael Black) wrote:

But, you are posting to an existing newsgroup that is quite active, trying to lure people to your "forum". What's missing is why anyone should leave here to go somewhere else. If they are happy here, they'd have little interest, and if they aren't happy here, they aren't likely to see your message.

It's like he just opened a restaurant that has nothing on the menu yet but peanut-butter-and-jelly sandwiches and tater-tots, so he goes to an established restaurant down the street, walks from table to table, and hands out flyers for his place.

John

Nah- it's more like he/she typifies the parasitic leach narcississy type who usually won't bother with any acknowledgment of a helpful answer to his/her question- but is willing to turn into a 500-word-per-post smart ass punk sh_t when someone criticizes them off their high horse. If he/she wants answers, he/she can go to knock-on-door and pay for it.