

Re: Best place on usenet to ask about PCs

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2006-06/msg01581.html>

- From: mrदारrett@xxxxxxxxxx
 - Date: 7 Jun 2006 08:58:24 -0700
-

Glenn Gundlach wrote:

Helmut Sennewald wrote:
<snip>

Hello Graham and Jim,

I have XP on my newest PC. There is nothing better when it comes to any kind of USB-devices these days. XP is better in recognizing USB devices than W2000. WIN98 is so bad here, that it isn't worth to name it. Many big companies have now switched all there PCs from W2000 to XP. XP will require a more powerful PC of course. It's no fun with a 500MHZ Pentium.

Dual boot requires to first install W98 and then XP or W2000 on a different partition.

I expect the order of installation has to be in the order of their advent. At least WIN98 must be installed first.

Best regards,
Helmut

I had a dual boot with DOS 6.22 and WinXP. The manufacturer software for a video routing switcher does not run correctly with WinXP so I changed it to triple boot (added win98se) and did not have to re-install XP. I used Partition Magic to resize the partitions and add a 3rd. Win98se went in third and also runs fine.

GG

Wow, DOS 6.22 and Win98SE? Almost makes more sense just to dedicate an older computer for legacy devices. I'm impressed that DOS 6.22 could recognize your newer hardware...

Re: Best place on usenet to ask about PCs

I dusted off an ancient NEC '486 laptop from the garage, running Windows 98... planning on using its serial ports to play with my PICAXE microcontroller project. (I have a feeling Windows 2000 won't like me talking directly to the serial ports.)

Michael

.