The recent, well publicised scare about liquid bombs on airliners will certainly have the effect of removing people's minds from Bush's and Blair's Middle Eastern policy.

Kind of like locking the barn door after the horse escapes, isn't it?

I wonder howcome, if they caught these 24 conspirators, doesn't that mean that what they already had in place worked?

If "the terrorists" have intent to merely disrupt people's lives, have our liberties stripped away, and cause the maximum inconvenience for the maximum amount of people, it seems that the Bushists are playing right into their hands.
