

Re: Eeyore hates American movies too...

Re: Eeyore hates American movies too...

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2006-10/msg01163.html>

- From: JoeBloe <joeblo@xx>
 - Date: Sat, 07 Oct 2006 13:33:02 -0700
-

On Sat, 07 Oct 2006 21:20:31 +0100, Eeyore <rabbitsfriendsandrelations@xxxxxxxxxxx> Gave us:

martin griffith wrote:

"FrankBemelman" <f.bemelman@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

"John Fields" <jfields@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> schreef

I could go on and on, but why don't you tell us what you don't like about our movies, OK?

IMO the US has a brilliant movie industry. Music industry is top notch as well.

Great effects too. In Notting Hill, Hugh Grant walks across a market. It's appears as one single camera shot, but it shows all the four seasons, from autumn, winter, spring, summer.

It's so subtle, the first time I didn't even notice it.

Oops, www.imdb.com lists it as UK/US.

Sorry 'bout that ;)

haha, and dont forget a certain animation company in Bristol, good stuff there!

There is a nice very long shot (time not camera) in Contact, with a kid walking up the stairs, but I'm afraid it's probably been green screened and mangled later in post production

Re: Eeyore hates American movies too...

There does seem to be a lot of US finance for UK made films, (which say a lot about the UK) and so a UK made film can be called a US film because of the finance.

Funny since the UK seems to buy all the US debt
http://www.optimist123.com/optimist/2006/09/foreign_buyers_.html

wish I could understand this financial crap

It's an 'investment' !

Seems like every American owes ~ $30,000.

I have zero debt.

.