I could go on and on, but why don't you tell us what you don't like about our movies, OK?

IMO the US has a brilliant movie industry.
Music industry is top notch as well.

Great effects too. In Notting Hill, Hugh Grant walks across a market. It's appears as one single camera shot, but it
shows all the four seasons, from autumn, winter, spring, summer.
It's so subtle, the first time I didn't even notice it.

Oops, www.imdb.com lists it as UK/US.

Sorry 'bout that ;)

Re: Eeyore hates American movies too...

haha, and dont forget a certain animation company in Bristol, good stuff there!

There is a nice very long shot (time not camera) in Contact, with a kid walking up the stairs, but I'm afraid it's probably been green screened and mangled later in post production

There does seem to be a lot of US finance for UK made films, (which say a lot about the UK) and so a UK made film can be called a US film
because of the finance.

Funny since the UK seems to buy all the US debt wish I could understand this financial crap

It's an 'investment' !

Seems like every American owes ~ $30,000.

I have zero debt.

Your Government has spent that $30,000 for you ( in tax cuts and wars and the like ). That $30,000 is in addition to any domestic debt.
