

Re: OT: browser hostile sites language. I use Netscape 7, and some pages don't format right, left-side is offscreen and no scroll-left possible. I'm switching to Firefox, but some sites don't support that either, I've read. Seems everyone is "standardizing" on IE, whatever version is latest.

--
Jim Yanik
jyanik
at kua.net

After years of swearing I would never give up IE -- I finally loaded firefox for one reason only -- too many IE hostile sites -- sites that load malware and adware to your system without your permission, and for no other reason than that IE has too many bloody security holes.. and too many of these breeze right by any protective software you might have installed (I run a virus scanner and 2 adware/malware blocker/scanner apps -- and I was STILL getting slammed got to the point that the powerstrip wasn't enough -- had to wipe and reload to get the crap off
!!)

Ya wanna know what sucks ?? I hit a site that was firefox unfriendly (html incompatible) so I loaded IE just that once -- and BOOM -- my file search function doesn't work any more !! I'll have to reload again to fix that one apparently because while one of my scanners found what got loaded (it couldn't stop it as it installed), it apparently didn't clean up EVERYTHING that got dumped on me

Go firefox asap -- and forget IE exists -- if a site isn't compatible with both browsers, it's not worth accessing -- this from a former

Re: OT: browser hostile sites

hardcore IE junkie

I'm in the process of trying to install a new 100G HD to replace the old 10G HD in my 900Mhz Athlon(K7VMA MB),and W98 doesn't want to load right on the new HD.(I partitioned it to 4 25G drives with Partition Magic)
It also doesn't want to recognize the 56K PCI Lucent Win modem(dialup..) that W98 on my old HD recognizes;if I move the modem to the next slot over,then it recognizes it,but then the old HD doesn't in that new slot when I switch back;wierd..
I plan on installing the old 10G HD as a slave HD,and use the 100G as the master drive,so I can access all the files on the old HD.

I'm making progress,but s_l_o_w_l_y.
I managed to download and install Firefox 1.0 on the new HD(from NoNags), F-F2.somethingBeta (straight from Mozilla)wouldn't load at all.

I HATE IE,all versions, and wouldn't use it at all.

—
Jim Yanik
jyanik
at W98 only supports 2048mb partitions. At least on the boot partition.

Cheers

kua.net

Ahhh...that is because you asked for FAT16.
It has been too many years since i setup Win98Se from scratch; if you can choose FAT32, then do so but make sure that you keep its size (and all bootable DOS partitions "above" it) below the 1024 cylinder limit *IF* you intend to then install Win2K in the "next" partition (you will get a menu to choose OS).

Re: OT: browser hostile sites