How many people have a cool head
when they lose control
of their car?

What an utterly ridiculous comparison.

They are quite the same thing.

No they aren't. What a ridiculous assertion.

Practice makes perfect.

Where do practice crashing your car ?

Graham

One does not practice at failure to control the vehicle. One practices controlling the vehicle optimally, to thus preclude, prevent, or worst case minimise crash severity. For motorcycle operators this amounts to learn this or die.

How are you going to know the limits if you don't go past the limits?
And how will you learn to recover from a slide if you never slide?

Granted, motorcycles are different.

I try to put my heart in my throat at least once per week... 100MPH on city streets will usually do it ;-)
