

Re: DTMF dead?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2007-07/msg01100.html>

- From: "Joel Kolstad" <JKolstad71HatesSpam@xxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Mon, 9 Jul 2007 14:52:36 -0700
-

"Nico Coesel" <nico@xxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message news:469287fd.52824567@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

That is a very valid argument. But there many reasons (wiring, connectors, transformers, code size, etc) why ethernet doesn't fit in this application.

You can still use a PoE controller IC even if you don't have "real" Ethernet anywhere... they're really just your standard switching converter ICs with a simple "protocol" thrown on top to let the controller "handshake" with the power provider system.