Hi, my name's Chris and currently finishing my college degree in EE. I was really interested in leaving some sort of legacy for my department and my professor suggested building a Transmission Line Demonstrator for her RF and EMC class. I looked up online and could only find 2 sites, one that sold them, and another that gave a very short description.

Has anyone here ever tried to build one or has any idea what it entails, as well as any references anyone might have? The help is greatly appreciated. This isn't for a project by the way, its just one thing I want to do for my school
