Re: proper response?

Source: http://sci.tech−archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2007−08/msg04512.html

- From: John Larkin <jjlarkin@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
- Date: Thu, 23 Aug 2007 16:00:27 −0700

On Thu, 23 Aug 2007 12:25:32 −0700, Jim Thompson
<To−Email−Use−The−Envelope−Icon@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

> On Thu, 23 Aug 2007 12:12:05 −0700, John Larkin
> <jjlarkin@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:
>
> > I just finished designing another board, a waveform generator, and I asked one of my guys, my most−recent hire actually, to look it over before we gerber it. He said "I really don't have my head into what I was doing, so I'll take a day or so and give it a full check assuming that it was designed by an idiot."
> >
> > What should I have replied to a statement like that?
> >
> > John
>
> I don't know the employee's personality, nor, for that matter, I don't really know yours... you don't always respond well when I razz you a bit ;−)

But a newsgroup is such a convenient place to be crabby without consequences. Especially for people like me who are so darned nice in real life.

John

.