Wild idea breakthroughs are a staple around here. The burden of proof is on the presenter, to explain why it might work and then to explain why it isn't already being done. Sorry, conspiracy theories are not accepted.

I've posted such numbers dozens of times, and your PC or MAC can otherwise search for and thus uncover all the fancy numbers you'd care to review. However, from time to time I'll edit and thereby revise upon a given application.

OK, refresh my memory: if we convert aluminum oxide to metallic aluminum by electrolytic smelting, and convert the aluminum back to electricity in a Al-H2O2 battery, what's the net efficiency?

Brad Gruth doesn't care about efficiency. In his world there will be limitless FREE solar power to do this.

I guess you know lots more than most of us village idiots, as to where that 64,000+ teraWatts of solar energy is going, along with the 7.2e20 kw that's continually existing somewhere between us and our moon, not to mention terrestrial wind that's seriously kicking our AGW butts, plus tidal flows and geothermal energy that's clearly for the taking by those half as smart as Warren Buffett, and that's only demanding that you be 1% as smart as our resident LLPOF warlord(GW Bush).

Are you saying thar Eeyore and company isn't 1% as smart as GW Bush?

At which point of course he simply shows himself to be a clueless IDIOT.

At least the mindset of this supposed "clueless IDIOT" hasn't imposed or otherwise caused any collateral damage or carnage of the innocent. How about your energy sucking and global polluting self?

Eeyore isn't 1% as smart as a fence post, but he's got you beat by a wide margin.
