There was some kind of legal battle between her and the dealer.

What was her name? In what court were the papers filed?
This will be on public record ...
if you're not still making it up as you go along.

Checking the Santa Cruz County Superior Court old case lookup, it's there, but without much detail.

I would post the case number, but I don't want her name dumped into a public forum.

I would rather have to live with you believing that I fabricated the entire story, than to dump someone else's private affairs into a public forum, simply because you don't agree with one number (which I admitted I wasn't totally sure was accurate). If this were my personal affairs, I might consider posting the case number, which incidentally wouldn't verify the case particulars because no evidence had been presented. However, I won't do that to someone else.

You also fail to appreciate the difference between attacking someone's opinions, claims or facts, versus attacking the individuals involved. I'm more than willing to debate the former, but you'll need to find someone else for the latter. I won't play your game, whatever it may be.
