

Re: OT: Eudora a good alternative to Thunderbird?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2007-10/msg01856.html>

- From: Joerg <notthisjoergsch@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 10 Oct 2007 17:58:13 -0700
-

Joerg wrote:

Hello Folks,

After the umpteenth freeze where I can't get any email to the laptop I've had it with Thunderbird. Mozilla was good and a lot less buggy but it ain't now more, only the huge SeaMonkey version.

Eudora now says on the site that the no-nagware version (paid) is no longer being sold. Does this mean Eudora may be going away?

Ok guys, found it out. There was an older Norton version on there, hasn't been update since 2006 so it hasn't changed. Beats me how that could suddenly interfere. It had to actually be hosed off the harddrive in its entirety, then a reboot, before Thunderbird would work.

—

Regards, Joerg

<http://www.analogconsultants.com>

.