

Re: Herd instincts?

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2007-11/msg03692.html>

- From: bill.sloman@xxxxxxxx
 - Date: Fri, 23 Nov 2007 17:27:53 -0800 (PST)
-

On Nov 23, 6:52 pm, John Fields <jfie...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

On Fri, 23 Nov 2007 03:50:18 -0800 (PST), bill.slo...@xxxxxxxx wrote:

On Nov 22, 8:36 pm, John Larkin
<jjlar...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

On Thu, 22 Nov 2007 10:33:29 -0800, JosephKK

Slowman hits a home run.

Funny definition where it dribbles off the bat
into the catchers mitt.

I can't read his posts. They're like being beaten with a boring stick.

Sure he can. But he finds it "boring" to be reminded that he doesn't know as much about biology as he'd like to think.

Regardless of what you may think he knows or doesn't know, he's right about you being boring.

Reading stuff you don't understand can be kind of boring – at least until you do get to understand it. Since you don't seem to understand much, you could well find my posts boring.

Re: Herd instincts?

You'd probably be better off concentrating on stuff you can understand
– 101 things a boy can do with a 555, and the like.

--
Bill Sloman, Nijmegen

.