

SED Posts in the Wild

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2007-11/msg03717.html>

- From: D from BC <myrealaddress@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 23 Nov 2007 20:44:43 -0800
-

I'm nearing my 2000th post to SED!

It took me awhile to figure out why some people are on here.
My latest thought is..... for 'advertising' :)

Awhile back I did my post "JFET Common Source DC Amplifier Temperature Compensation"...

Well.. I was surprised to bump into my own posts in Google web results. Not google group results.

Also, I was surprised how fast Google got to indexing that thread.
For keyword "JFET compensation", the thread is top of the list for web results!!
(Google.ca)

That thread is then repeated in:

epanorama.net

sci.tech-archieive

Both of which, I know nothing about.

Question is: Is it effective advertising for an electronics designer?

D from BC

.