Would you save your computer during a fire?

If you see this as a likely occurrence, you need a laptop and a docking bay or a desktop computer with an easy-remove type drive bay where you can just snatch out the HDD.

If you have actually done a recent BACKUP[1] of your data (NOT a mirror), loss of the box will be an annoyance, but not really significant.

The mention of insurance in this thread is noteworthy.
Unless you just bought the box, the replacement will be better.

[1] A "backup" is not a backup until it is OFF-SITE.
