

Re: copper the new oil?

Re: copper the new oil?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.design/2008-05/msg00797.html>

- From: Simon S Aysdie <gwhite@xxxxxx>
 - Date: Tue, 6 May 2008 17:37:50 -0700 (PDT)
-

On May 5, 5:58 am, Jim Yanik <jya...@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

krw <k...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote innews:MPG.228787ed9de9b6f9989bb2@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx:

In article <Xns9A93F26BB50F8jyanikkua...@xxxxxxxxxx>, jya...@xxxxxxxxxx says...

krw <k...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in news:MPG.2286187cea89e573989ba8@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx:

In article
<MPG.2285d51e3803261598a...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>, nospam.k...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx says...

In article
<pan.2008.05.02.19.20.14.148...@xxxxxxxxxx>, n...@xxxxxxxxxx says...

On Thu, 01
May 2008
05:58:19
-0700,
JosephKK
wrote:

You
are hallucinating
again.

Re: copper the new oil?

We
the people
have shitted
away
most of what
the Constitution
had granted.

The Constitution
DOES NOT
"grant"
anything.
You are born with
all
of the rights
there are –
you know,
"endowed
by their creator..."?

What the Constitution
is supposed
to do is
grant
limited
powers
to the government,
at the
consent of the people,
and
PROTECT
the natural
rights that

Re: copper the new oil?

we all have.
THAT's the part that's getting
raped.

Thanks,
Rich

Very good point you've made there. But the Amendments do try to enumerate the rights some of us hold.

Actually, they don't (try to). Other than the thirteenth amendment,
their purpose is to explicitly limit the federal government (the states less so).

IMO,once a territory joins the United States,they agree to abide by the Constitution;ALL of it,not just the parts they like.

Wasn't my point. Much of the Constitution is explicitly a limitation on the FEDERAL government not state governments (e.g.
"Congress shall pass no law"), though the federal government has pretty much reversed the roles.

but the first ten amendments protect BASIC rights that not even the states should be infringing.

That was most certainly not true. Application of the Bill of Rights to state law is through the Incorporation Doctrine. (Through the 14th.) Bullshit, but it happened. Wrong, but current reality.

.