

Re: I killed my Hitachi 28" widescreen ;-(

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.repair/2005-01/2558.html>

---

From: jakdedert (jdedert\_at\_bellsouth.net)

Date: 01/21/05

Date: Fri, 21 Jan 2005 13:48:00 -0600

Jerry G. wrote:

- > This can be anything that you did. You may have bridged some traces or
- > connections, or didn't properly solder some of them. If you made any
- > bridged connections or created a critical opened connection, there is
- > a chance that some other components have been damaged.

It could be none of the above. He may have disturbed a loose connection which was in a totally different area. Excellent advice below:

- >
- > If you are not experienced at TV servicing, your best bet would have
- > to bring the set in to a service center to have it serviced in the
- > first place. The repair may have not been too expensive to start with.
- > Jerry G.
- > =====

jak