

Re: legacy computer for donation

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.repair/2005-08/msg01504.html>

- From: "James Sweet" <jamessweet@xxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Tue, 23 Aug 2005 03:06:28 GMT
-

"Heavy G" <nospam@xxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:ig5Oe.31323\$Oy2.20104@xx
> There is your problem, you installed windows on it.
>
> a computer that old is probably not suited for 98. maybe thats why it had 95
> on it. if you want to get better use of the computer.. boot it up to win 98, > douse it in gasoline and then throw a match on it. that will fix everything
>
> :)
>

95 and 98 have similar hardware requirements, if it's at least a P100 with 16 MB then either should be fine, not that either is a particularly great OS
but you don't have a lot of options that will be useful to the average person.

• References:

- ◆ legacy computer for donation
◇ From: someone2
- ◆ Re: legacy computer for donation
◇ From: Heavy G
- Prev by Date: Re: Neighbor's contractor cut my phone line
- Next by Date: Re: Better For TV Health (preventing burn-in): Turn It Off or Leave On (non-logoed) Channel?
- Previous by thread: Re: legacy computer for donation
- Next by thread: 80's TV UHF tuner
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date

Re: legacy computer for donation

◆ Thread