

Re: Talking about Target stores

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.electronics.repair/2006-12/msg01664.html>

- From: "Michael A. Terrell" <mike.terrell@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Tue, 26 Dec 2006 16:36:59 GMT
-

M Berger wrote:

Our local Target store was packed, and their sales figures don't reflect any problems.

Some of us appreciate corporations that have the integrity to treat all charitable organizations equally. The Salvation Army is a self-proclaimed "evangelistic christian organization". Many people prefer secular charities. But frequently the Salvation Army was the ONLY charity allowed to solicit. Our local Salvation Army helps people who commit to their CHRISTIAN "bootstrap" program and discourages everybody else. Why should they be given all the charitable collection advantages?

Michael A. Terrell wrote:

A lot of people were boycotting Target stores after their ban of any charity from their parking lots a few years ago. The biggest was Salvation Army, along with their traditional kettles for people to drop coins in as they pass.

You are absolutely right. In fact, they should put machine guns in all of their parking lots and shoot anyone who dares to smile, or utter those banned words, "Merry Christmas". They shouldn't recognize the holiday season, and close down from the end of October, till the end of January to make sure none of their products are given as gifts, as well.

—
Service to my country? Been there, Done that, and I've got my DD214 to prove it.
Member of DAV #85.

Michael A. Terrell
Central Florida

.