The next thing to look at is the face and strap color. The new style seems to be bold and exciting colors for the dial and strap. However, be cautious about purchasing an extravagant watch if you are looking for an every day versatile watch. That bright red or green dial is not going to be professional for that important business meeting you have to lead later in the week. Choose your colors according to how you intend on using the watch.

The third facet to look at when looking for a men's watch is the face. It is important that you select a face that is comparable to your wrist size. If you have a large wrist and you select a medium size dial, it is going to look like you have a women's watch on your wrist. The latest trend is extremely large dials which can be seen being worn by many of the top actors today.
