WTF are you talking about!??

Just what kind of money are you using? Have you looked at it lately? Mine says "Federal Reserve Note" on the front, has the name of the country on both sides, and is signed by the Treasurer and Secretary of the Treasury. Each bill has a picture of a dead president on the front and, depending on denomination, the seal of the US or a picture of a government building on the back. The government designs the money, prints the money, sets its value, and regulates its use and supply.

To use a government created, controlled, and approved medium of exchange and claim "It isn't the Government's Money" is startlingly ignorant.

I see. Not only are you not familiar with the medium of exchange you choose to use, you haven't read the U.S. Constitution either. FYI, when the party taking money from your earnings is the government, it's not called theft (which implies illegality), it's called an income tax (which is perfectly legal, as spelled out in the sixteenth amendment).

After you check out the constitution, you might want to check out the bible as well. Some of your other posts espouse creationism, so I'm fairly sure you're a fan of the man who said "Render unto Caesar what is Caesar's...".
