

Re: beanstalks (was Re: Metallic hydrogen ...)

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.energy/2004-06/0877.html>

From: Eric Gisin (ericgisin_at_graffiti.net)

Date: 06/15/04

Date: Tue, 15 Jun 2004 12:00:05 -0700

"Richard Henry" <rphenry@home.com> wrote in message news:4cHzc.3182$ey.2260@fed1read06...

>

> > Trees get hit and are made of wood. I never saw wood conduct well.

> > Yet I would never go under a tree to hide from a thunder storm.

>

Stick a couple green twigs into your 120V outlet and tell us how it feels.

> Wet, sap-filled trees are better conductors than air.

>

All living trees are wet under the bark. A neighbour fell a tree on the 14KV line and it started burning.

Lightning sees everything but good insulators as a conductor.