

Re: Italy, ready to go nuclear

---

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.energy/2007-02/msg00275.html>

---

- From: Rolf Martens <rolf.martens@xxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Thu, 15 Feb 2007 08:55:40 GMT
-

In article <1171470518.195532.89260@xx>, dave.walters@xxxxxxxx says...

[The pendulum is continuing to swing toward Nuclear power again. Of the 3 main "anti-nuclear" countries, Sweden, Germany and Italy, all 3 are now reversing their previous policies. Italy is unique because the did shut all their reactors and now pay the highest costs for fuel in Europe--D.Walters]

Unfortunately, this is not true at all – at least in the cases of Sweden and Germany. There is some empty talk, because of the people's strong opposition to the arch-reactionary destruction policies. But these anti-nuclear-energy policies are CONTINUING UNABATED.

From: World Nuclear News

Italian cabinet minister speaks in favour of nuclear 13 February 2007

Probably – I'm sorry to say – precisely the same empty talk as that by some politicians in other countries too. Also Blair and Bush, for instance.

Bush in 2002 talked of an "ambitious" programme in the USA. And what has come of it, 5 years later? One (1) reactor MIGHT get started on later in this year.

Look at the actions of those people, not at their enforced hypocrisy.

Rolf M.
www.rolf-martens.com

Re: Italy, ready to go nuclear