

Re: Electric Vehicles saved from the shredder

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.energy/2008-06/msg00179.html>

- From: Eeyore <rabbitsfriendsandrelations@xxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 06 Jun 2008 09:46:32 +0100
-

Rob Dekker wrote:

"Eeyore" wrote

Rob Dekker wrote:

Yes. That's what GM says. Not what the EV1 owners say, nor what the 4,000 people on the waiting list said.

Thos numbers are an irrelevance. They were as Daestrom correctly says 'the faithful'. They'd have bought the EV1 if looked like a box-cart.

If people want box-carts, then sell them box-carts. Why not ?
The point is, the EV1 was much more than a box-cart. It was a small, fast gasoline free sport model.

That no-one could ever have afforded to buy.

Tell me one thing : for which GM car model was there even a waiting list ? And was that model and the people on the waiting list treated the same as the one for the EV1 ?

Stop whining about a lousy old-technology proof-of-concept car. It served its purpose but was basically crap. Much better is now on the way.

You look ridiculously stupid, wanting to turn the clock back.

Re: Electric Vehicles saved from the shredder

Graham

.