

Re: Global warming "hockey stick" questionable?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.geo.geology/2005-02/1913.html>

From: BillC (joedoakes_at_compuserve.com)

Date: 02/26/05

Date: Sat, 26 Feb 2005 00:10:19 GMT

<lifeform1@atlantic.net> wrote in message
news:1109365645.016672.122130@g14g2000cwa.googlegroups.com...

> February 25, 2005

>

> BillC wrote:

>> >

>> > Tech Central Station Questions ...

>>

>> The article is published in Geophysical Research Letters.

>

> No, the article I was commenting on was published > on Tech Central Station. I highly doubt that you > have read the article referenced to, if you had,

> you would know that if only questions a small > aspect of the original formalism of Mann, et al.,

> and does not detract from their result in any > substantive way, nor does it address the other > numerous data and proxies which support the > general conclusions of global warming and > climate change.

>

> On the other hand, Tech Central Station's > agenda and funding sources are well known.

>

> What is that crammed up your ass, your head?

>

> Thomas Lee Elifritz

The last exchange we had, that you lost badly, shows it is you who has his head up his ass, punk.

In the thread "article in latest sci american" it was demonstrated that you are an incompetent and a liar.

You further proved your incompetence in that by dismissing the article. It was written by a reputable scientist, and passed a review, and it's an idea that has been around for a while, but you in your incompetence dismissed it..

Go put your head up your ass somewhere else.