

Re: Ancient Magma 'Superpiles' May Have Shaped The Continents

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.geo.geology/2009-01/msg00319.html>

- From: "George" <George@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sun, 11 Jan 2009 22:55:43 -0500
-

"J. Taylor" <nchiwana@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
<news:112f1766-06ed-4fdb-9ca2-afe52e10a4e7@xx>
On Jan 11, 1:52 pm, brad <lbjohnson1...@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

On Jan 11, 3:14 pm, "J. Taylor" <nchiw...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

My error, energy and mass are directly proportional,

If you'd already learned this we could have saved time teaching you .

Yes my error, but I must be excused, I get so confused reading George's post. They are so filled with so many logical fallacies that every time I read one of them I have become conditioned to just question everything he writes. This time I was wrong.

=====

Exactly where in my post (the one that said that energy and mass are directly proportional) was there a logical fallacy? The fact is that you apparently don't know how to do basic math, and you want to blame someone else for your stupidity.

but they are not equal

Anything to save face , huh ?