

Re: Ancient Magma 'Superpiles' May Have Shaped The Continents

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.geo.geology/2009-01/msg00335.html>

- From: "George" <George@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Mon, 12 Jan 2009 10:20:32 -0500
-

"J. Taylor" <nchiwana@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
<news:76854e2d-d9c9-4ba4-83ac-c7c8defd3cb7@xx>
On Jan 11, 7:55 pm, "George" <Geo...@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

"J. Taylor" <nchiw...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
<news:112f1766-06ed-4fdb-9ca2-afe52e10a4e7@xx>
On Jan 11, 1:52 pm, brad <ljohnson1...@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

On Jan 11, 3:14 pm, "J. Taylor" <nchiw...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

My error, energy and mass are directly proportional,

If you'd already learned this we could have saved time teaching you .

Yes my error, but I must be excused, I get so confused reading George's post. They are so filled with so many logical fallacies that every time I read one of them I have become conditioned to just question everything he writes. This time I was wrong.

=====
Exactly where in my post (the one that said that energy and mass are directly proportional) was there a logical fallacy? The fact is that you apparently don't know how to do basic math, and you want to blame someone else for your stupidity.

but they are not equal

Anything to save face , huh ?

Re: Ancient Magma 'Superpiles' May Have Shaped The Continents

To answer your question, mass of Earth changes and so does the moon's

In the same proportion ? How convenient !

Speaking of misleading and deceptive. It is no wonder I make an error understanding what the likes of you, George and Nicholas are saying, you are basically dishonest, as witnessed by the evidence you have just presented.

=====

You made the claim (mass of Earth changes and so does the moon's). Now prove it or leave the discussion to those who actually know how to do 7th grade math.

George

Why don't you actually study logic rather than pretend you know something about it and use terms incorrectly. To answer your question is not a claim, you idiot, it is an answer and is its own proof, you dope.

Can you be more stupid?

JT

=====

Ok, let's recap. You said mass and energy were NOT proportional. Two of us said that you were wrong and showed you why. You insisted that we wrong, calling us idiots. When Florian told you the same thing, you suddenly had a change of heart and admitted your mistake, but claim that you could only think of me and that that is why you made the mistake, and then proceed to make yet another mistake (Mass of earth changes and so does the moon's), and so repeat the same "idiot" remark you made when you made your last "mistake". You know, there are some mental conditions that are characterized by projection of one's own faults onto others. Shall I take a guess as to which one you are afflicted with, or do you want to leave that as a personal issue between you and your therapist?

George