You just won't let go will you – just as one issue starts to die away you throw in another troll!

You have been trying to prevent Sam from continuing to post his alerts in his customary manner – I fail to see why a large number of other users effectively asking him to ignore you and continue for our general benefit could be considered to be "bad form". If no one had spoken up in his defence then he would have been justified in assuming that he was in the wrong and that your views were representative of the newsgroup as a whole, which clearly is not the case.

Now please try and think of something interesting to say about the science of satellite navigation, to bring us back on-topic!

David
