

Re: uh?

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.lang.japan/2005-11/msg00022.html>

- From: Sean <notsean@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Tue, 01 Nov 2005 15:09:18 GMT
-

On 11/1/05 12:59 AM, "Paul Blay" typed:

> "Marc Adler" wrote ...
>> Paul Blay wrote:
>>> When transcribing "uh?" in Japanese characters >>> what do you use? It sounds quite different to F to >>> me but, although they use it all the time in anime and >>> such, I can't think of an obvious way to note it down.
>>
>> You mean when translating it, or when transcribing it?
>
> I mean transcribing.
>
>> Also, what's up with your English, dude? It sounds "different to F >> to" you?
>
> What's wrong with that?
>
> "The sound that I have described as "uh?" sounds quite > different to the sound typically represented by the Japanese > character F."

That "different to" thing is just another example of how the Brits are mangling our language.

>
>> Is someone else posting under Paul's name?
>
> Because my reputation is _so_ worth stealing. :-P

.

- Follow-Ups:
 - ◆ Re: uh?
 - ◇ From: Paul Blay
- Prev by Date: Re: Is the yomi here correctly connected?

Re: uh?

- Next by Date: Re: uh?
- Previous by thread: EDICT : sashizume +(uk) & (example sentences)
- Next by thread: Re: uh?
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread