According to Jim, there is something called ØQâu dQXH

eÊâu is much more common, by the way. Also,
to get b you type di.

Ah, there it was. I was under a (evidently wrong) impression that the IME in WinXP uses no b's what so ever and simply works with X.

Next question, since Paul mentioned that ØQâu
isn't used frequently, will be - what should i use instead... oops, there it is already. Thank you!

Just to clarify - if i wish to express "my suggestion is that we go to school" i'll go as follows.

ÁnDÊÊBH eÊâu of!kLM~W†F
Node silently if that is (more or less) correct.
