

Re: Where is tsukejie?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.lang.japan/2005-12/msg01140.html>

- From: "Paul Blay" <ask_me_or_get_spam_trapped@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 29 Dec 2005 10:57:45 -0000
-

"Sean" <notsean@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote ...

On 12/28/05 7:04 PM, "Paul Blay" typed:

Well that's more plausible than your first suggestion but it's still a sentence that needs carefully constructed context to make it sound natural rather than one that stands on its own two feet.

I agree.

Well I'm not one to turn away agreement but I think we're all on slightly different wavelengths here. By the time I'd got to that post I was well past 0Qáu or eĈáu and was solely considering the naturalness of the English sentence.

In the snow case wouldn't the ~X j ' be more likely to say f !kLc_¹LDD^ or f!kLKj0afh F.

As far as suggesting in the way Konrad initially indicated, perhaps the better term would be | <.

f!kLOSh'| < I await the corrections of the masters.