

Re: Sdf<

Re: Sdf<

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.lang.japan/2007-04/msg00129.html>

- From: "Andreas Rusterholz" <rusterholz@xxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: 6 Apr 2007 21:19:47 -0700
-

On 4Gå, HM10:07, Bart Mathias <math...@xxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Marc Adler wrote:

On Apr 3, 2:42 pm, "Marc Adler" <marc.ad...@xxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

I don't think publishers totally made the switch to the new kana-zukai until the 50's,

If anyone's interested, here's a patent from 1978 that uses big d's.

Go to http://ep.espacenet.com/numberSearch?locale=en_ep, stick JP53140765 in the the "Number:" field, click the top result, then click "Original Document."

Nobody ain't mentioned yet (perhaps taking it as implicit) that in such texts anything that would be f, ..., or ‡ in most writing nowadays will be ,, †, and ^ instead, too.

Bart

That's right. In fact Japanese Laws have been written with ,, † ^ ×ón'øM and d Åón'øM until the end of 1988 (-Œ63t).

See: <http://www5d.biglobe.ne.jp/~Jus1/Bunsyo/yayuyotu.html>
(-Œ t å ...fŒ6@İz, ÷...fŒ6@w~İÜ²K%
...f~?...fÅ<²Bfn å)

Andreas Rusterholz

Re: Sdf<

Re: Sdf<

..

.