

Verbs with -teiru

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.lang.japan/2007-11/msg00014.html>

- From: Tremal-Naik <lallero@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 01 Nov 2007 10:16:18 +0100
-

Hi to all and sorry for my english... I'm reading a japanese grammar and I've got a doubt with verbs and the -teiru form.

I understand that a phrase like:

inu wa uchi ni agatteimasu

means "The dog is entered in the house" (there is a state-change in the subject), not "The dog is entering in the house".

My doubt is this: a phrase like

ima, inu wa uchi ni agarimasu

is a correct grammar construction to say "The dog is entering in the house" (in this moment) or there is a more elegant construction?

Thanks in advance for the answers!

.