Mind bog..bog..boggles....:-)

Oh, and yes, thank you, Frogguy.

Obviously, The Consultors were not familiar with works of one Terry Pratchett:

"In a distant and second-hand set of dimensions, in an astral plane that was never meant to fly, the curling star-mists waver and part... See...

Great A'Tuin the turtle comes, swimming slowly through the interstellar gulf, hydrogen frost on his ponderous limbs, his huge and ancient shell pocked with meteor craters. Through sea-sized eyes that are crusted with reum and asteroid dust He stares fixedly at the Destination.

In a brain bigger than a city, with geological slowness, He thinks only of the Weight.

Most of the weight is of course accounted for by Berilia, Tubul, Great T'Phon and Jerakeen, the four giant elephants upon whose broad and star-tanned shoulders the disc of the World rests, garlanded by the long waterfalls at its vast circumference and domed by the baby-blue vault of Heaven. Astropsychology has been, as yet, unable to establish what they think about. etc. etc."

So, this has been revealed in the very Prologue of The Original Discworld

Book. Clearly, the world has never been immobile. And it'll get worse, much worse, after A'Tuin will have reached the Destination.
