

Re: how to say "god does not exist" in arabic?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.lang/2004-08/3145.html>

From: David Brandon Thomas (vaelynphi_at_aol.comZOT)

Date: 08/25/04

Date: 25 Aug 2004 03:44:42 GMT

In article <slrncinpgj.4gq.nospam@odin.buserror.net>, Scott Wood <nospam@buserror.net> writes:

>On 24 Aug 2004 20:26:01 GMT, David Brandon Thomas <vaelynphi@aol.comZOT>

>wrote:

>> In article <412B26FE.7427@worldnet.att.net>, "Peter T. Daniels"

>><grammatim@worldnet.att.net> writes:

>>>Do you, too, not understand about crossposting? Mr. Lee will not see >>>your message.

>>>--

>>>Peter T. Daniels grammatim@att.net

>>

>> I tried crossposting it; if it did not work, I don't really care.

>

>It didn't, and Peter was explaining why you should. With most >newsreaders, one has to make an effort not to continue >cross-posting if the parent article was cross-posted (except in the >presense of a Followup-To: line, which the post you replied to did >not have).

>

>> Shouldn't there be something in Usenet etiquette about posting to >> groups you do not read? It should be equivalent to spam, another >> unanswerable form of communication.

>

>It's not unanswerable; you can answer by continuing to cross-post.

>

>Yes, cross-posting is often abused, but there's nothing wrong with it >when a thread is legitimately on topic in all of the groups >involved. If everyone had to trim the newsgroup list to only those >groups that they read, there could be no discussion between members >of different groups.

>

>If you feel the cross-post is inappropriate, you can set a >Followup-To: header to indicate this. Such a line indicates which >group you will be reading from, and tells people in other groups >where to go to continue the discussion if they wish.

>

>-Scott

sci.lang: Re: how to say "god does not exist" in arabic?

In a perfect world, maybe.

– Vae

"You are here to learn the mysteries of Kung Fu, not linguistics. If you can't understand me, I will communicate with you like I would a dog. When I yell, when I point, when I beat you with my stick!" {Pai Mei}