It seems that A.Gross's latest piece of self-advertisement (a rather banal review used — inevitably — as a pretext for a few swipes at "MIT linguistics" from Alex's accustomed position of magisterial ignorance) has met with the respect it deserves from sci.lang — total ignore.

As if anticipating this disappointing result, Alex not only packaged his read-me plea with some pre-emptive insults against three sci.lang regulars he refers to hilariously as the "Three Stooges", but actually devoted an entire lengthy (of course) separate post (with personalized subject line, the Usenet guttersnipe technique of choice) to anticipating what Peter T.Daniels might respond. Well, at least this got a response, commendably restricted to pointing out that Gross was still a fool and a liar.

Just to anticipate in turn — and before this gets too long — I predict that Alex will proceed to snort and fart in my general direction, whilst using the remaining orifices to sing his own praises.
Or maybe he won't. Who gives a fuck?

Just so you know we're still here, Alex.
Haven't missed you at all.
