Glossary of the new Magdalenian words, part 17

The name of Poseidon is not yet understood, so I propose PAS TON, the one who gets everywhere and makes himself heard; Poseidon was originally the god of the Eurasian rivers, he created the horse, and he was the earth-shaker.

The Hebrew name Nathan means: God gave. The original meaning could have been: NOT TON, the one who knows and makes himself heard, the one who speaks out of a divine inspiration, out of the inner knowledge God gave him ...

Now it's time for a story in Magdalenian. A young professor of paleo-linguistics goes on a time-travel to Lascaux, arrives there in the spring of 14,681 BC, meets a lovely young woman, takes a few lessons in Magdalenian, then he meets her parents and greets them as follows:

OC LIC ABA SARA, OC LIC AMA SA RAA, OC LIC MA OC. Mm NOT TON, LIL MmOS TA, GID GID ABA, GIS GIS AMA, SAI SAI ...

OC means eye and I (ego), LIC means light and luck, OC LIC means I see light, I am pleased. MA OC means my darling, my eye, apple of my eye; OC LIC MA OC means I love you, TA means your. Imperatives or wishing forms are given by doubling a word. What he says is then: Im a pleased to meet you, father of Sarah, I am pleased to meet you, mother of Sarah, (and, toward Sarah:) I love you. I myself am a teacher, I desire your daughter, give her to me, father of Sarah, bless us, mother of Sarah, be it so, be it so ...

Glossary of the new Magdalenian words, part 16

TON SON, NOT NOS, ONT ONS, TNO SNO, OTN OSN ---- sound and knowledge (here, for once, the S-words are comparative forms of T-words)

TON ---- thunder, sound, voice (of a ruler, shaman, coming from a powerful or divine source); ancient Greek tonos for rope, chord, tone, tension, meter of a verse, Latin tono for I thunder, make a very loud sound, speak with a booming or thundering voice, sing (of God), tonat for it thunders, Tonans for Jupiter and Saturn as thunder gods, Jupiter Tonans, tonitrus for thunder clap, French tonnère German Donner for thunder, German Ton for sound, English tone

SON ---- living being (of a high rank?); ancient Greek zoon for living being, perhaps also German Sohn English son

NOT ---- knowledge, to acquire knowledge via the senses, via experience, to observe, learn and know; Latin nosco novi notum with about the same range of meanings

NOS ---- mind, sound, feeling, heart; ancient Greek noos for mind, reason, ratio, spirit, insight, way of thinking, heart, feeling, opinion, wish, intention, will ONT ---- reality, the world as it is, knowing the world in all its colors (consider the Celtic Salmon of Knowledge of many colors); ancient Greek ontos for really, actually, indeed, wherefrom ontology

ONS ---- benefit from opinions that are based on reality; ancient Greek onaesis for benefit, help, luck, blessing

TNO ---- pondering reality, thinking, giving advice; ancient Greek danos for advice, thought

SNO ---- to care for each other, to find solutions in a common effort; ancient Greek synoia for care, synnomos for friend, husband, synodos for gatherings where problems are discussed, pondered, and solved (syn-forms)

NTO ---- false, ignoring reality; ancient Greek nothos for fake, not genuine

NSO ---- insane, denying reality, also denying a beyond, a reality transcending our present-day knowledge; ancient

Re: what is etymology? (linguistics and biology)

Greek nosos for insanity

OTN --- ear, listening to people who know, also metaphorically to a divine voice or inspiration; ancient Greek otion for ear

OSN --- request, prayer, to a ruler, a shaman, a divine being, in the sense of: we heed your words, now we are in trouble, please help us ...; ancient Greek osiae for divine law, Oisin (Osheen) Ossian was the son of Fion Finn who ate the Salmon of Knowledge – "much larger than a common salmon and, on its shining skin, all the colors of the rainbow seemed to dance and swirl" (Ian Zaczek) – and was asked to save Tara from the goblin Aillen, Hebrew Hosanna Hosh(i)-ann-ah "save we pray"

Glossary of the new Magdalenian words, part 15

LEI IEL, EIL LIE, ILE ELI --- attack of a lion, pronounce the words with a clicking L

LEI or)EI --- attacking lion; ancient Greek leo and lys for lion, leianno leiano for I crush, bruise, destroy IEL or IE) --- to shout and yell when one sees a lion, throwing stones and spears at a lion, still yelling (onomatopoeic); ancient Greek iaelo for I send, throw, iakho for I shout EIL or EI) --- to hide from a lion; ancient Greek eilyo for I cover up, creep, cower, crouch (...)

LIE or)IE --- to escape from a lion; ancient Greek liazomai for to escape ILE or I)E --- to be spared by a lion; ancient Greek ilaemi for to have merci ELI or E)I --- to rest, and thank for having been spared; ancient Greek elynio for I rest, give up

Eli would then have been the one who can avert a lion: the Lord who delivered David from the paw of the lion, then from the paw of the bear, then from the hand of Goliath. Daniel can be read as DA IEL --- freed from having to yell: the Lord saved him and the wise men of Babylon from Arioch's men, and he delivered Daniel from the lions in the den. The Hebrew name means: God is my judge – God judged Daniel, found him worthy, and saved him twice.

AChI LEI ——— swelling water (achi) attacking lion (lei), possible origin of Achilleus

Glossary of the new Magdalenian words, part 14

The name of David seems to be a problem of Hebrew philology. We may read it as DA PAD, away from (da) activity of feet (pad), delivered from the paw of the lion, delivered from the paw of the bear, delivered from the hand of Goliath, delivered from the paw of that brutish and towering Philistine.

Words from last year: GHI for the cry of the seagull, meaning a bird in general; SHA for a ruler over an expanse of land with water AC, together GHI SH'AC for the birdman as the supreme ruler. This title may survive in Isaac. The son of Isaac was Ja'aqob Jacob, which name may be a form of SHA AC, consider also that the ruler of the province of Judah was a sagan. In a dream, Jacob saw a ladder to the sky, the Lord on top of the ladder, in an aureole we may assume, speaking to him. Jacob's byname was Israel. In this name we may find AS RAA EL, to the shining Lord above. EL would be a survivor of clicking L, a very old word for the chief, the lion man, the one who could take it up with a lion, the one who had the say. Leo leonoe Loewe lion, logos for word, reason. The L survives in English Lord, the precursor of Baal was El, Eli is the God of Israel, Allah the God of the Muslims.

Four words from last year, with a clicking L: LOG or)OG for word, reason, having the say; GOL or GO) for the cavity of the mouth; GLO or G)O for the sacred utterances of a shaman in a trance; OLG or O)G for holy, Old English haleg and holeg, German heilig, female given name Olga from a Scandinavian word meaning holy.

–: I –: (lip lick, produce the sound given as –: by touching both lips with the tip of the tongue), derivates LIL LIB BIB DD ——— forms of desire; ancient Greek lilaemai for to desire, Latin and English libido, Latin bibi for I drink (thirst being a powerful desire), Ugaritic DD for loved, beloved (Cyrus H. Gordon), Minoan Dadu for loved by (Walther Hinz), Dido for the loved one

The name of Delilah can be explained in a similar way as the one of David: DA LIL, delivered from her desire, satisfied, in the case of the biblical Delilah freed from her desire to know the secret of Samson's power and strength – he fooled her three time, then he told her the truth (Hebrew meaning of Delilah: she who longs for).
