

Re: /S/ /Z/ /tS/ etc.

Re: /S/ /Z/ /tS/ etc.

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.lang/2006-09/msg00154.html>

- From: "Peter T. Daniels" <grammatim@xxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: 3 Sep 2006 06:41:27 -0700
-

Ruud Harmsen wrote:

2 Sep 2006 14:51:16 -0700: "Peter T. Daniels" <grammatim@xxxxxxxxxxxx>:
in sci.lang:

No, it proves that people with congenital creaky voice can succeed in spite of it.

Did I say otherwise?

Yes, you said it proves that Americans don't dislike it. It's entirely possible that he can have a successful career as an activist and a broadcaster with a voice people dislike.

You're right. That possibility didn't occur to me.

Just to be sure, is:
http://seattlepi.nwsourc.com/audio/nwspeak/cm_creaky_apartment.mp3 the same as the kind of creaky voice you mean? It is what I mean. If your own computer isn't sound equipped, could you borrow one for a

And where, praytell, would I "borrow a computer for a moment"?

From a colleague, at your employer's, you walk by and ask if you may Colleague?

Re: /S/ /Z/ /tS/ etc.

Re: /S/ /Z/ /tS/ etc.

"At" my employer's?

How many times have I explained that my employer put a WinBox in my home office so I could, as it were, telecommute?

listen to this sound for a second? Or a neighbour, maybe? A public library with internet access? An internet café? (Cybercafé, if that's what it's called).

This is not Europe, where the latter