If you'll check the sci.lang archives, you'll find that there was a bit of a kerfuffle because that Institute was at some point to some extent funded by someone who also funded white supremacist organizations. Someone thought that that meant that anyone who ever published in JIES was a white supremacist.

So the amazing pictures of the Horse nebula in the constellation of Orion taken by the Hubble telescope are invalidated by the fact that the NASA was mainly built up by Wernher von Braun?

Adlf Htlr believed the CroMagnons were a supreme race, accounting for the supremacy of the northern Europeans. In my opinion, the Ice Age triggered new inventions of all kinds, which, by the end of the Ice Age, traveled eastward and southward, reaching Goebekli Tepe, then spreading to Asia Minor, Egypt, Iran, India. The great era of Europe started only later, when the achievements of Asia Minor, Mesopotamia, Egypt, Persia, India, etc., reached Europe. Ex oriente lux – a formula the Nazi ideologers hated. By the way: just a couple of days ago I read about the result of a genetic study: one of ten Germans has Jewish blood rolling in his or her veins ...

PPS for the killrating mob of sci.lang: the message of an adept of Graham Hankook passes unrated? Yes, that's understandable. I can't expect anything else from you. In the late 1990s I fought the Hankook mania in sci.archaeology, pointing out the racist fog in his work, namely the assumption that the Egyptians were not able to build the Great Pyramid without the help of
