I know Franz, I know Du! an, etc, and I can happily ignore their threads most of the time.

Your calling me a crank is an ad hominem. As long as you can't falsify my approach to early language – you and all the other edus with all your universities and libraries and publications and connections to scholars in your background –, as long I am entitled to go on with my experiment.

As for Google: they allow criminals to use my name and Google identity and fill my Google account with bizarre stuff that appears under my name. So they have a security problem and are a part of the present mess.
