Franz: Refusing to follow Helmut's suggestion in your posts is one thing. Active removal of his subject code is something different.

I don't think Franz did it deliberately. I seem to recall reading that dropping [stuff] in brackets from the subject header is a known defect of Google Groups.

That makes some sense, in which case I has less reason to be rude. I also came to realize that I placed the responsibility on Franz after a reconstruction based on comparison of Harlan's and Pat's answers. Or, rather, I placed it there based on Harlan's post alone and thought I got it confirmed when an independent attestation emerged. However, the absence in both could be the result of independent but parallel development in the two branches. Although in that case I'm sure someone would have told me by now. Either way I should apologize for overstating my conclusions about his intentions.

Either way, it's solvable. Try (mgd) and see if it sticks.
