

Re: and who made god?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.logic/2004-10/1168.html>

From: block (block_at_nowhere.com)

Date: 10/26/04

Date: Tue, 26 Oct 2004 16:03:24 GMT

"Mani Deli" <mani@sympatico.ca> wrote in message news:g2ssn0tjhikl7js40hikh9848supbv4n8@4ax.com...

> The theist argument that god is the first cause is demolished by the > question, and who made god.

>

> The next question for those who ignore this point is how do you get > from there to any theological assumption?

>

>

Just to throw a spanner into the works, what if the past happened in the future?

What if at some stage way in the future we had the ability to time travel and alter time and God (or whoever) went back in time and created a beginning that did not effect the outcome of our current present and future.

At the stage we are now, we might wonder how it all began – but maybe it has not begun yet?

Maybe it did not so much begin, as came into being – we merely realized that we existed! Where were we? Why, where we had always been! How did it all begin? Well who knows, but I am sure as soon as there is a beginning we will be told! ;)

A nice simple beginning that we can understand – for now, and when we have grown out of that beginning and sneer at such things as the Bible, or the big bang or evolution – then no doubt God (or whoever) will go back and create a more satisfactory beginning.

For everything to have a beginning is equally unlikely as for everything to have an end. Both are equally impossible.