I've mused about this in the past, and the recent spews of garbage here have made me think of it again.

There is, it seems, a place for (a need for??) something on the net between the garbage-ridden sci.logic and (say) the FOM (Foundations of Mathematics) mailing list. E.g. a moderated forum, with a large enough group of moderators not to need too much work from any one person to keep it on track and free of cranks and buffoons.

If there is interest, I might look into the practicalities of setting one up: but what do others think?
