That sounds good!

Why not just write "never" instead?

My main home computer does not have windows installed on it (partially dictated by the fact it's CPUs are incapable of running Windows) and my laptop rarely runs Windows. I guess for every 100 times the laptop boots Solaris, it boots Windows once. So I guess a more accurate figure would be that I avoid Windows around 99.5% of the time!

So I exaggerated by about 0.5%, which does not sound too bad!
