

Re: Prime factorization

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.math/2004-09/6696.html>

From: Dik T. Winter (Dik.Winter_at_cwi.nl)

Date: 09/28/04

Date: Tue, 28 Sep 2004 00:16:49 GMT

In article <873c13focf.fsf@nonospaz.fatphil.org> Phil Carmody <thefatphil_demunged@yahoo.co.uk> writes:

> willem@bermon-dot-net.no-spam.invalid (Wilhelm) writes:

...

> > Well i certainly did not come here to get flamed or pushed into the > > ground. So my idea isn't going to work on 100digit big primes but > > it's doing quite nicely on big prime numbers and it does work nicely > > as a prime number generator.

>

> *I admit to being blunt, perhaps unnecessarily so. However, please > see things from our view – you appeared to do no research, not > even a simple googling for factorisation methods, before you came > here and asked your question. If you'd have done the research then > 1) You'd find your answers without waiting for others to reply.
> 2) You'd not have annoy the grumpy regulars here
> 3) You'd find bucket-loads more information*

One thing that bothered me was that his method was secret at first.

Bob Silverman already commented on that.

--

dik t. winter, cwi, kruislaan 413, 1098 sj amsterdam, nederland, +31205924131 home: bovenover 215, 1025 jn amsterdam, nederland; <http://www.cwi.nl/~dik/>